Chapter 1 by Aaron Hartmann

February 17, 2015

School was pretty good today. We drew out some plans for our co2 cars in tech ed. I made mine look like a sports car. In ELA we were assigned to read 2 chapters from To Kill a Mockingbird. We had a STAR activity today (Students that achieve recognition). We had to answer some questions on a sheet and go get it signed by a teacher. Whoever gets all six signatures wins. My group got one signature for science. For social studies we had a quiz on North African countries but I didn't finish. In math we got a review sheet. I also got student of the month for choir.

School was horrible today. They didn't have french fries at lunch, and I drew to go first with my Individual Oral Presentation for English, not to mention the fact that I had to go out of my way and turn in the biology homework I'd forgotten yesterday when I don't even go near that classroom on my typical walk. Plus my toe is bruised, so while I can walk it kind of hurts. A lot.

Also, the zombie apocalypse is the best thing ever.

On the whole, a pretty average day. I'm glad I got home, because they won't let us bring battle axes to school, and that is just begging for trouble, you know?

Chapter 3 by Brock Thompson

February 19, 2015

Well the zombies killed my sister and two of my friends, but I aced my math test, so I'm pretty pumped.

They should really let us bring guns to school now, only the teachers are allowed to have them. I have to admit that my English teacher looks like a badass with that shotgun.

I guess I'll just bring a machete?

Chapter 4 by Aaron Hartmann

February 20, 2015

Today at school I made a shank out of a wooden spoon. My science teacher turned to a zombie so I stabbed him in the head. I got sent to the principle's office for having a weapon in school, it's stupid.

After school I was going to piano lessons and saw a woman get mauled. I ran over and shot it in the head.

It was a pretty average day, nothing really special.

Chapter 5 by Laura Walker

I really don't understand why we have to go to school. The principal was infected today, so I don't know how the school is going to survive.

In other news, biology has become a lot more interesting. We got to dissect our dead... well undead science teacher's body. It kinda smelled.

The faculty finally let us bring weapons to school. When I say weapons, I mean plastic knives from the cafeteria. They don't come in use in a fight, but it helped me navigate through a dead zombie in biology.

I heard over announcements that our report cards will be coming out in the next few days, and that the school will be offering a zombie survival elective.

The downside of being picked for janitor of the week is that our English teacher really likes his machete. I have to go and get this over with. Hopefully I don't get too much dead zombie on my shirt.

Chapter 6 by Brock Thompson

February 22, 2015

The school district is considering its attendance rules. You know how if you're absent in school for more than 10 days in the year without a pass you have to go to court? Yeah, they're thinking about changing the 10 days to 15.

Also, gym is required every day, and it's all a bunch of cool parkour and fighting and stuff! They say it's to give us a better chance against zombies and keeps us in shape at the same time. It's so much fun! Except I accidentally killed Brett.

Chapter 7 by Aaron Hartmann

February 23, 2015

Today at school we had a ceremony outside. Well, it was more of a burial because it was just my friend, Brock, and I digging a whole and saying a few words to our deceased friends, Brett.

Anyways, there was a huge thunder storm and a lightning bolt hit the school. I saw a zombie get hit by a lightning bolt and explode.

I just realized that before the apocalypse I would be throwing up into the bathroom but now it just feels perfectly normal.

P.S. I heard that the army is coming. Can't wait!

Chapter 8 by Comp Som "CS" Anichi

February 28, 2015

A cure was found for the zombie disease some days ago, the army came bearing with it.

They figured we can be part of helping cure the people. It was simple. We simply needed to inject these into the zombies. We were given rifles, handguns which contained the cure in pellet form. Besides from that, we were given seven cartridges of ammunition.

It was time to bring my nerf skills to use.

The town was split up to three sections: the market place; the town hall, and the residential sections. We would go in groups of 5 students and 2 grownups. Of course, I was with Brock.

Too bad Brett won't be able to see this.

So, this is going to be like a big top super operation, so I don't know how long it will take. I think it's a good idea to end the journal at this note, so this is my last entry.

And to whoever reads this-
